

The Lattès example with a diagonal arc blown up.

The Lattès subdivision rule has two tile types, A and B . Each tile type is a square, and each is subdivided into four subsquares. This example is obtained from the Lattès subdivision rule by “blowing up” a diagonal arc in the subdivision of tile type A . The first four subdivisions of tile type A are shown.

